Are solar salespeople a bad thing?

But the solar industry is full of bad actors, with solar salespeople knocking at your door with misleading offers and overpromised savings. Solar salespeople might try to lure you in with promises of free solar panels and limited-time special deals. In most cases, these are just aggressive sales tactics they'll use to rush you into a contract.

Are salespeople flouting the solar tax credit?

Going in with a strong understanding of some key solar topics can help you spot when a salesperson is flouting those guidelines. Salespeople are likely to tout the federal solar tax credit. When you install solar panels (and certain other related technology) you receive a portion of the cost back on your taxes.

Are solar panels worth the cost?

Solar panels can be worth the cost for some, but not every rooftop is suitable for solar panels. In the northern hemisphere, panels produce the most electricity facing south, although east- and west-facing panels work, too.

Are door-to-door solar sales a scam?

Not all door-to-door solar sales are considered scams, but what they're pitching should be taken with a grain of salt. Going solar is expensive and shouldn't be an impulse decision, no matter how pushy the salesperson is. "Legitimate companies will answer your questions," McGovern said.

How do I get a good solar deal?

The Federal Trade Commission: The FTC also offers advice on how to get a good solar deal. Advocacy groups: Groups like Solar United Neighbors and GRID Alternatives help people go solar. If you qualify for their programs, you may score an expert guide through the process.

Do solar panels save you money?

Solar panels installed and operating correctly will reduce the electricity you use and can save you a bunch of money, but the effect on your bill will vary. Before going solar, be sure you understand how your utility compensates you for the electricity you produce. These rates aren't necessarily set in stone.
